MARY PICKFORD IN 'THE ETERNAL GRIND'

Famous Players Star Superb in Role of Factory Girl

Sadly bedraggled and ragged, Mary Pickford feebly opened the heavy door, paused before the time clock, punched follows him to Mary's new abode with a revolver, bent upon avenging his duplicity. When Mary discovers Ernest's relations with Amy, she takes the revolver from the girl's hand and holds him at the point of the gun while a minister is obtained. Then, concealed behind a curtain, with the muzzle of the gun pressed against Ernest's back she forces him to go through the wedding ceremony with Amy.

But that is only one of the tremendous battles that Mary wins in her struggle against poverty and avarice in this great story which furnishes Mary Pickford with a tremendous opportunity to demonstrate her remarkable histrionic powers to the full. In support of the star there appear several notable players, among them Loretta Blake, Dorothy West, John Bowers, Robert Cain and J. Albert Hall. At the Ye Liberty theatre Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

'The Wall Between' at the Oregon Sunday and Monday

Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, the two most distinguished stars of the screen, will be seen here at the Oregon tomorrow and Monday in 'The Wall Between,' a five part Metro production. This production is an adaptation of the novel of the same name written by Ralph D. Paine, and deals with the barrier which exists between commissioned officers and enlisted men in the service of the United States army. It is a thrilling military story that will grip the spectator from beginning to end. Mr. Bushman never had a role better suited to his remarkable dramatic gifts, and Miss Bayne is equally as well provided with a strong part.

Most of the scenes were made in and around the United States forts near Savannah, Ga. More than 500 regular soldiers were used in these scenes. An intimate and interesting series of scenes were photographed inside one of the forts, including the officers' quarters, the quartermasters' department, the mess hall, gymnasium and other picturesque glimpses of real life in the regular army. John W. Noble, under whose direction 'The Wall Between' was produced, is well qualified for the task, being a graduate of West Point, and having seen seven years active service in the army as a lieutenant and captain of the Philippine Scouts.

There is a series of marvelous battle scenes in 'The Wall Between,' where 500 American soldiers are pitted against 1,500 natives of Nicaragua, who are supposed to be in an uprising. In these striking pictures Mr. Bushman excels anything he has ever done before on the screen, a guarantee that the performance is of unusual interest. Miss Bayne, too, has a strong role which she considers the best of her career. There is an unusually capable supporting cast.

MR. FREDERIC C. HOWE

From the Kansas City Post. Any American community is the better for merely hearing Frederic C. Howe. There cannot but be a stirring of civic activity after a visit of the vigorous democrat. The singular clarity of his utterances is, of course, bolstered on an extended experience and much thought as to the real missions of cities.

Modern civilization takes dangerous trends unless corrective measures are resorted to. Cities in Europe have understood this for decades. They have substituted for the divided camps or hostile interests usual in great communities a feeling of love and reverence by the citizens for their municipality.

The method used was simple, as outlined by Mr. Howe. It is to do away with privately owned utilities. By holding out this bait to the unscrupulous money makers, every community has centered its activity in getting service out of utilities they have given away. The intercession of politicians as beneficiaries of the system, keeps up a constant wrangle. Growth of cities is stunted, progress hampered and delayed.

Mr. Howe's home, Cleveland, has taken away this great home of the American city. There no longer is anything for the politicians and the money makers to fight over. The city owns its great utilities and is justifying that ownership by giving fine service at rates much lower than obtained in any other city in the United States.

'The benefit to Cleveland lies not so much in the dollars and cents saved, but in a broader feeling of communal unity,' Mr. Howe said. 'Men loving their city when it does things for them. City owned utilities always are progressive. They are immediately responsive to public opinion. The community owned water plant filters its water. It gets it from the best source possible. Always such utilities try to give real service. That is their mission, not profits.'

'An' we went to a big department shop,' said Uncle Jed, on his return home, 'an' we got into one o' them 'ere things wot wizes you clean up to the top—what in tarsation is their name, na?'

'Shoplifters, Jedediah,' Mrs. Shucks replied.—Ex.

Hostess (at party)—Does your mother allow you to have two pieces of pie when you are at home, Willie? Willie (who has asked for a second piece)—No ma'am.

'Well, do you think she'd like you to have two pieces here?'

'Oh, confidently, 'she wouldn't care. This isn't her pie!'

Three-year-old David had been unusually unruly. He had received reprimands, threats and finally mild corporal punishment from his father. With wounded dignity David mounted the stairs to his mother's room.

'Mother!' he said, in a voice of exasperation, 'I can't stand that husband of your's much longer!'

Margaret Mason Writes of Gotham Fads and Fashions

By Margaret Mason. Her parasol is edged with fringe. And she's fringed on her dainty gown; Her curling lashes fringe her eyes And she lives on the fringe of town.

New York, June 2.—To be on the fringe of society is the last thing one could wish, but to have on the fringe of fashion is the latest thing one could wish.

Indeed it seems as if fringe were infringing on the popularity of all other trimmings.

The fringed frock is omnipresent and boasts anything from tiny edging of vivid hues yarn fringe to a deep fringe of silk, either black or of a tone to match or contrast with the gown.

It is used effectively on the bottoms of the wide skirts and to edge the bell-shaped sleeves.

One stunning evening model shows an entire overskirt of knotted silk fringe of yellow, black, blue, green and old rose over a petticoat of turquoise-blue chiffon. The sleeves are mere shreds of fringe and the apology for a bodice is a scrap of the turquoise chiffon.

The new wide cape collars are edged with narrow, colorful fringe; hats have a narrow yarn fringe edging and I even glimpsed a swagger dandy who wiped her up-tipped up-to-date nose on a handkerchief of pale mauve with a tiny old blue edging of thread fringe. Fringe is certainly up to snuff.

On the loose long taffeta coats and wraps either for day or evening wear the fringe is waving with the plumed ruffings as a finish but it is as a finish for a parasol perhaps that fringe reaches its truly highest point.

One smart sunshade of emerald taffeta is built on the flat, many ribbed

Chinese parasol lines with a blunt little snubnose ebon ferrule and a long knot-finished handle of the same glossy black.

A bright green silk cord is knotted round the handle, with a fitting loop through which its owner's fair arm is meant to stick when she shuts up her sunshade in shady byways and chooses to dangle it at arm's length.

The real finishing touch of this adequately lovely parasol however, is an edging of three inch black silk fringe that brooks no infringement of the sun's rays across the summer girl's countenance.

A ebriassque sunshade is one of black and white striped taffeta. The stripes radiate outward from the center and end in a fringe of alternate black and white striping to match the silk. The handle to this is of white with a black knob at the top.

A serious parasol fringed like the black and green one is also very striking though a bit prone to cast a too rosy glow over a healthy countenance. No one may expect to look pale and interesting under cover of a serene sunshade.

A shell pink taffeta sunshade that is a mass of petal shaped scollops like a huge pink rose just adds the pink of it, Japanese ETOAIN N. N. N. N. perfection to a summer toilet of white net and pink picot ribbon, but a shade deeper it is wiser not to go.

A purple satin parasol veiled in a film of black Spanish lace with quaint purple knotted stick, in a Fifth avenue window is a replica of great-grandmother's that now maulers in the attic and proves the aphorism that there's nothing new under the sun—not even a 1916 parasol.

SALEM HIGH SCHOOL CLASS GETS DIPLOMAS

Eloquent Address and Excellent Advice Features of the Event

Before the largest audience that ever assembled in the armory to witness the commencement exercises of a graduating class, the 109 seniors of the Salem high school received their diplomas last night and listened to words of admonition from the Rev. Carl Gregg Doney, president of Willamette university.

'The Elements of Leadership' was the subject chosen by Mr. Doney. He claimed that idealism was one of the conditions of mind that was necessary for a leader. 'No one can think without relating pictures and the person who thinks as an idealist feels a finer condition than that about him,' said Mr. Doney. 'It is a necessity of your mentality that one must dream dreams.'

The student would have a hard time in life to be intellectually honest and yet to be a leader and one must have a common sense conscience. The speaker referred to the history of Wendell Phillips in his fight for the freedom of the negro to illustrate his point that a leader must be an idealist and also referred to other leaders and their efforts during the abolition period.

There is nothing greater in political history than to study the influence of conscience on our political leaders, he said, and claimed that when the people demanded a man, it was because the people believed the man had a conscience, citing the fact that today, the people had confidence in Roosevelt, Hughes and Wilson, because each was conscientious. 'Conscience goes into all things, and by it we are measured.'

Taking everything into consideration, Mr. Doney believed that common sense working along with a conscience and a certain amount of idealism, were conditions necessary for leadership.

Principal J. C. Nelson in a short talk asked the question, 'Does it Pay?' and proceeded to answer it in the affirmative, claiming that it was the greatest investment in the world to give the young people of the city the advantages of a high school education. He said that while the high school could not turn out a finished product, yet it had saved them from entering too early into the activities of the world. 'We have developed them and they must of necessity be better citizens.'

Chairman B. J. Miles of the school board of education, thanked the people of Salem for supporting the board in its efforts to give the best that could be given in high school work. He advised the graduates to mark out as soon as possible their life work. He also thought that the 85 per cent of the class that intended to continue their education would not be obliged to go outside of the state as the Oregon institutions offered advantages equal to any.

The music of the evening was furnished by mixed choruses from the high school and the singing of a duet by Miss Lura Minton and Max Alford. The invocation was pronounced by the Rev. Pemberton of the South Salem Friends church.

The Willamette university scholarships were awarded to Hettie Walton and Victor Taylor.

How Cherry Queen Contestants Stand

The voting contest for queen of the Cherry fair will close two weeks from today. Now that the several lodges have become interested, the contest has taken on new life and every day shows several thousand votes cast for the favorites. It has been suggested that many people are willing to help the Cherry fair financially and the best way this can be done is to spend a little money in voting for the queen. All money received from this contest will

COURT HOUSE NEWS

District Attorney Ringo was today examining the bonds of the 17 banks in this county that have sought to qualify under the law as depositories for county funds. The law provides that the bank shall submit a bond to cover the amount of county money that is deposited in the bank upon which 2 per cent interest is paid by the bank to the county. The bonds are not for any specified amount but the sureties agree to bond the bank for any amount of county funds that might be deposited in the respective banks. The banks in this county who have secured bonds are: Capital National Bank, United States National Bank and Salem Bank of Commerce of Salem; Coolidge & McClane of Silverton; Bank of Mt. Angel, Aurora State Bank, Oregon State Bank of Jefferson, Bank of Woodburn, First State Bank of Donald, Stayton State Bank, Security State Bank of Woodburn, State Bank of Turner, Peoples Bank of Silverton, Farmers & Merchants Bank of Stayton, State Bank of Hubbard, State Bank of St. Paul and the Annville State Bank.

Judge Galloway today granted a decree of divorce to William W. Barry from Esther B. Barry on the grounds of desertion. The couple were married in Fossil in 1908 and have four children. The plaintiff, Mr. Barry was granted the care and custody of Samuel T. Barry aged seven years and Bessie B. Barry aged six. Mrs. Barry was granted the custody of William W. Barry aged four years and Julia J. Barry aged two years.

In the case of the state of Oregon against the Salem Hospital association and the Oregon Childrens Aid society Judge Kelly today issued an order requiring the state to pay the full amount of the judgment in the condemnation proceedings, $25,000 to the Salem Hospital, according to the stipulation entered into by the attorneys for both parties to the action.

Carl H. Johnson was bound over to the grand jury yesterday in justice court without bonds to answer to a charge of pointing a gun at his brother E. A. Johnson at their home about five miles north of this city. The parents of the boys have a divorce suit pending in one circuit court and it appears that the sons have taken opposite sides in the controversy.

ALL IS ARRANGED FOR THE BIG CHERRY FAIR

Commercial Club, Cherrians and Fair Board Working in Harmony

The tourist, publicity and convention department of the Commercial club in charge of the Cherry fair, the state fair board and the Cherrians will work in harmony to make the annual Cherry fair a complete success and at the same time the All-Oregon Fourth of July celebration which will take place at the fair grounds on the afternoon of the Fourth.

This was decided at a conference held last evening at the Commercial club between the members of the state fair board and the Commercial club. When plans were first being made, there seemed to be some conflict as to the entertainment to be given the visitors on the Fourth. After the conference last night, it was found that both the fair board and the Commercial club had been working on a program satisfactory to each. This includes the big celebration all day Monday, July 3, in the city and Tuesday morning in the city and night room. The afternoon of the Fourth will be given entirely to the program to be arranged at the fair grounds by the state fair board. It is understood that the fair grounds will be open all day on the Fourth and that there will be no admission charged to the grounds at any time.

By an unanimous vote at the meeting last night, on motion of M. L. Meyers, it was declared the sense of the meeting that the Cherrians and Commercial club co-operate with the state fair board in making the Fourth of July a grand success as an All-Oregon state celebration.

He told us, 'Strike for home and your country,' and I struck for home. They that struck for their country country is there yet.'—Selected.
